++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Turning brighter and more settled.

Today:
Mostly cloudy start, with early fog over parts of England and Wales slowly clearing. Northern and eastern UK then becoming brighter and breezy with temperatures a few degrees higher than the last few days. Many other areas remaining fairly cloudy.

Tonight:
Cloud and patchy rain over parts of southern UK clearing. Isolated wintry showers in the north and east. Otherwise dry with clear periods and a widespread air frost.

Friday:
A cold and frosty start. Patchy cloud and sunny intervals for most, with a chance of an afternoon shower across central parts. Best of sunshine across Scotland and west Wales.

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
Fine and settled to start the weekend with sharp frost overnight. Cloudier conditions and outbreaks of rain developing over Scotland and Northern Ireland before spreading erratically southeastwards.
